

Using the Web to resource your youth program can be exhausting and somewhat frustrating not to mention time consuming! Here are a few websites that will help cut down on time and add to your programming this fall.

The Thoughtful Christian

www.thethoughtfulchristian.com

This site has a tremendous amount of information, resources and general youth ministry help on it. Check it out.

Devotions 365 days of the year!

www.d365.org

What a cool site. A different devotion everyday of the year. This site is a collaboration between the PCUSA, The Episcopal Church and the Cooperative Baptist. Each devotion takes you through a series of pause, listen, think, pray and go – each with it's own part of the devotion. Go take a look – play around with it – super resource.

Pop Culture and Sunday School (or youth group or bible study!)

Take a good look at this site. It is full of helpful information for those of you who would like help in using music, movies, TV shows and the like to build a program around. There are multiple links to check out, resources to look at and tons of ways to stay connected. Rev. Peter Hazelrigg of Greensboro is the presenter on this site. Most of the information comes from a course he taught in Montreat this past May – there is even a link to this conference (Annual Recreation Workshop) which is one of the best hands on workshops in the country for recreation, community building, creative arts and worship (check it out, too!)
